"It would take all day and several pages to express our appreciation for the services provided by UC San Diego CADC.

When my mother began showing signs of what we thought was dementia, I knew we needed to find out what was really going on. However, where do we begin? I had nightmares of taking Mother to this doctor for one thing and another doctor for the next step, then here and there for lab work, etc. Not to mention explaining over and over again "why we were there" each time we met with medical personnel. Then I found SOCARE and after one telephone call, I knew we had found what we were looking for.

The UC San Diego CADC took care of everything and each time we went to an appointment, they knew exactly why we were there. We simply followed their instructions and the UC San Diego CADC took care of the rest and we knew at the end of the testing and exams not only would we have a specific diagnosis, but we would also have a plan going forward. I can't tell you what a relief that was for us then and still is to us today."
